

On Painting the Sea

Swift marks are light to the touch Fleeting, transparent layers of blue and green Nothing too heavy, until the darks are set in and Space is defined Adding force and depth to support what was getting lost.
A balancing act with no direction, where the possibility lives in empty space,
and the end is always a question...

